

Together We Can!

No one should stand alone in the fight to end overdose.

Get professional support early

There is support for people struggling with addiction and substance use disorders, Fresh Start also offers support for their families and the wider community, that is why our mission is to provide individuals, their families and the community a future free from the effects of addiction because it affects all who are near.

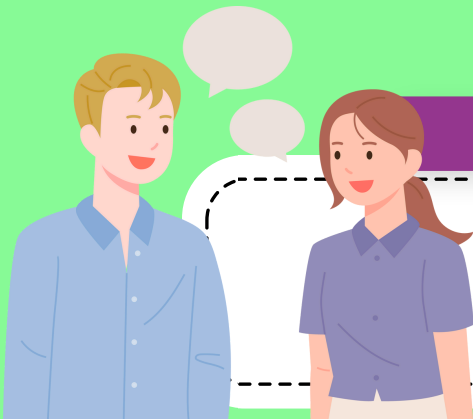

Educate yourself and others

Find resources online that are evidence based and factual to learn about addiction and substance use disorders, from what the different perspectives of the conditions are and just how many people it affects across Australia and speak about it, encourage others to do the same.

Listen and Support

If someone you know approaches you to talk about their struggles with substances, listen to them without judgement and only if asked, help them to find professional support that suits them and their loved ones.

Seek Support

If you are struggling with addiction yourself, speak to someone you can trust, family, friends, employer or GP and seek professional support. Also if someone you love is affected by addiction it can be hard on you too, seek professional support for yourself also.

If you often find yourself in situations where you may need Naloxone (short-term overdose reversal drug), over 500 pharmacies in WA supply free At Home Naloxone Kit for your own and others safety.
